PHI THETA KAPPA LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT STUDIES:

A Humanities Approach

The Instructor Certification Seminar is an intensive, interactive experience during which International Facilitators present course materials to demonstrate and explore Phi Theta Kappa's unique approach to leadership development. The foundation of the curriculum is the observation and study of great leaders portrayed in the Humanities by writers, historians, and film-makers as well as the observation and study of the works of great leaders themselves. Leadership wisdom contained in the selections from ancient Greece, China, Renaissance Europe, Early America, and twentieth century Europe, America, Asia, and Africa is often overlooked by traditional leadership development curricula. These carefully chosen readings show the passion, engagement, skill, and philosophies of many types of leaders, and the curriculum is designed to encourage personal reflection and the development of a personal philosophy of leadership.

Seminar participants experience the power of dialoguebased learning to examine "Classic Cases," excerpts of a philosophical treatise or literary work, and "Leadership Profiles," excerpts from a biography or an essay or speech by the leader. "Film Studies," clips from cinematic portrayals of historical or contemporary leaders, provide opportunities to observe leadership in action. "Experiential Exercises," assessments or games or simulations designed to highlight a particular leadership skill, allow participants to practice leadership skills. The International Facilitators demonstrate and explore how these elements in the curriculum and numerous additional readings from a variety of disciplines, including the behavioral and social sciences and business management, encourage critical thinking and the development of leadership insights. This diverse, interdisciplinary approach, grounded in the Humanities, makes the curriculum accessible and relevant to all.

Certification is a pre-requisite for anyone who desires to facilitate leadership development with this curriculum. Candidates for certification complete a series of preseminar assignments, and must attend the entire Instructor Certification Seminar.
